

XM radio and all of the services that they provide are the most valuable tools that I as an over-the-road truck driver have at my disposal. The ability to choose a city from XM's traffic and weather channels provides valuable information which will help me to be a part of the solution to traffic problems instead of part of the problem of congestion. It has saved me valuable hours of driving time that has allowed me to get to my planned stop location instead of having to stop in an unsafe place because I ran out of hours. Broadcasters of traditional radio currently do not supply this information in a useable fashion, due to the multitude of frequencies that they have to broadcast over. As a truck driver, I could never memorize all of the stations around the nations needed to have this same service.

I do hope that you will dismiss this action and get on with the more important business that the FCC has to oversee.
